What is AimPoint? The Three Steps. Step 1: Stand facing the hole and estimate the amount of slope in your putt by using your feet to feel the slope on a scale – most AimPoint users use a scale between 0 to 6. Step 2: Use your arm and fingers to determine where to aim your putt. The amount of slope you felt in Step 1 is the number of fingers you should hold up on that side of the hole.

Putter Aim. I am not against any tool that helps you to putt better. In fact, I would encourage its use if it helps to improve your putter aim. However, I believe putting aids that offer a best-fit aimpoint for every breaking putt should be used on the practice putting green or during a practice round.
