Faith and reason Different conceptions of faith cohere with different views of its relation to reason or rationality. The classic medieval understanding of faith, set forth by Thomas Aquinas, saw it as the belief in revealed truths on the authority of God as their ultimate source and guarantor.

Christianity - Faith and reason | Britannica

Grace from God correlates with faith in us. And the reason is that grace is God's free giving and faith is our helpless receiving. When God justifies us by faith alone, he has respect not to faith as virtue but faith as a receiving of Christ. So it is the same as saying that not our virtue but Christ's virtue is the ground of our justification. What Faith Receives. Now the key question is: What does faith receive in order to be justifying faith?

Faith and Reason | Desiring God

Faith and reason are both sources of authority upon which beliefs can rest. Reason generally is understood as the principles for a methodological inquiry, whether intellectual, moral, aesthetic, or religious. Thus is it not simply the rules of logical inference or the embodied wisdom of a tradition or authority.

Faith and Reason | Internet Encyclopedia of Philosophy

“Faith and reason are like two wings on which the human spirit rises to the contemplation of truth; and God has placed in the human heart a desire to know the truth—in a word, to know himself—so that, by knowing and loving God, men and women may also come to the fullness of truth about themselves (cf. Ex 33:18; Ps 27:8-9; 63:2-3; Jn 14:8; 1 Jn 3:2).”—Fides et Ratio

Fides et Ratio (14 September 1998) | John Paul II

Faith and rationality are both valid avenues to come to conclusions of truth. This is evident because a claim like “God exists” can be proved both from faith and reason. Human beings seem to have two conflicting instinctual assumptions about the world. The first thought process is that what we perceive is reality.
